

Behavioral Health Partial (BHP) Hospital Program at McLean Hospital

The Behavioral Health Partial (BHP) Hospital Program at McLean Hospital is accepting applications for Student Visitors and/or Academic Credit Students interested in receiving clinical research training. The student will work with Courtney Beard, PhD, and Thröstur Björgvinsson, Ph.D., members of the research and clinical faculty in Harvard Medical School. The student will be a part of the BHP's ongoing clinical research examining the effectiveness of Cognitive Behavioral Therapy for a range of psychological problems (depression, anxiety, personality, and psychosis), predictors of treatment response, psychometric properties of clinical assessments, and other related studies.

This position would be an excellent fit for applicants interested in obtaining doctoral training in clinical or counseling psychology or psychiatry. Principal experiences include: 1) assisting in running the clinical participants in the study, including administration of computerized questionnaires; 2) assisting the BHP Research Coordinator in data management and archival data collection tasks related to the research program; 3) assisting with literature searches, manuscript preparation, and presentations. Students will also have the opportunity to participate in weekly research meetings. The student will meet with the principal investigators in both one-on-one and group formats. Our previous students have been accepted into top graduate schools and earned authorship on presentations and papers.

Time commitment of at least 8 hours per week is anticipated. We are located at the BHP on McLean's campus.

To apply, please send CV/resume to:
Courtney Beard, Ph.D. at cbeard@mclean.harvard.edu