

Full-Time Lab Coordinator Position at University of Pittsburgh's Affective Neuroscience and Developmental Psychopathology Lab

The Affective Neuroscience and Developmental Psychopathology lab at the University of Pittsburgh (andp.pitt.edu) is hiring a full-time lab coordinator for our studies on adolescent brain development, adolescent psychopathology, and brain stimulation. Our work includes longitudinal research on the development and pathophysiology of depression, eating disorders, and anhedonia, and we employ techniques such as fMRI, clinical interviewing, experience sampling, and transcranial magnetic stimulation. The ideal candidate will have some background in scientific management and clinical assessment. The position could include opportunities to contribute to papers and presentations based on interest and expertise.

Anyone who'd like to apply can send a CV or resume to Morgan Lindenmuth (lindenmuthm@upmc.edu). Please contact Morgan for more info about the position, too.