

Bargh Lab Internship at Yale

The Bargh Lab (ACME Lab: Automaticity in Cognition, Motivation, & Evaluation) at Yale University is currently accepting applications for volunteer research assistants this summer. The ideal candidate is a motivated undergraduate or recent graduate with a keen interest in social psychology. Research experience is an asset but not a necessity. Research topics relate to shared experience, self/other biases, moral judgment, consumption behavior, affiliation goals, and racial bias. Interns are expected to work approximately 35 hours/week; this includes study preparation, data collection (in the lab and in the field), data analysis, and meetings.

Applications will be reviewed on a rolling basis until positions are filled. To apply, please send a CV, unofficial grade report, your availability between June and August, and a cover letter describing your relevant research experience and why you're interested in working in the Bargh Lab to BarghLabSummer@gmail.com.
