

Lab Manager in the Sustainability & Social Change Lab at Northeastern University

Description:

The Sustainability & Social Change Lab at Northeastern University is accepting applications for a full-time lab manager to join an interdisciplinary lab focused on social, cultural and political dimensions of sustainability challenges. This lab manager will work closely with Prof. Sara Constantino, and a team of PhD students, postdocs and collaborators at other universities.

The lab manager will primarily coordinate research and resources in the lab to aid in the lab's day-to-day affairs. The lab manager is also encouraged to develop and lead novel research projects as well as participate in ongoing projects, with opportunities to publish research in academic journals.

The position is ideal for someone planning to apply to a PhD program, and for someone with interdisciplinary interests focused on applied problems, such as climate change and poverty.

The duration of the position is for one year, with the possibility of extending the position for up to two years.

Interested applicants should send a CV, cover letter, and writing sample to the current lab manager, Clara Riggio (c.riggio@northeastern.edu), by May 31. Questions may also be sent to this address.

Read more about the lab on our website! Read more about the position here!

Apply here!