

Predocctoral Researcher in the IriSS Predocctoral Researchers Program at Stanford University

Stanford University's Institute for Research in the Social Sciences (IRISS) Predocctoral Researchers Program hires recent undergraduate degree recipients to participate in a broad range of social science research projects. The list of research projects can be found at: IRiSS Predoc Program Faculty Projects.

In addition to the goal of advancing research, the IRiSS Predocctoral Research Fellowship Program is intended to:

- create opportunities for predocs to deepen their knowledge of social science topics and methods, learn about options for advanced study, and build mentoring relationships to help launch their careers; and
- to expand the diversity of perspectives, experiences, and backgrounds of individuals entering academia and industry.

Applications for these one- to two-year paid research fellowship positions are now being accepted.

Apply here!