

Full-Time Research Coordinator Eating Anxiety Treatment (EAT) Lab at the University of Louisville, Psychological and Brain Sciences

Position Description:

Dr. Levinson, the Director of the Eating Anxiety Treatment (EAT) lab at the University of Louisville, is hiring a full-time research coordinator to work on a National Institute of Mental Health supported study examining how eating disorder symptoms and physiology, collected via wearable sensors, across time predict relapse and recovery. As part of this work, we work with a multidisciplinary program that is a cross-collaboration with the engineering department and school of medicine. As such, there will be many opportunities for cross-collaboration with our engineering colleagues. This position will involve working with clinical participants with eating disorders, running the day to day aspects of this study, working on grant proposals and publications, assisting with data preparation, assisting with institutional review board protocols, and working with a large interdisciplinary team both at UofL and with cross-site collaborators. The study coordinator will work very closely with Dr. Levinson and her team on a day to day basis.

Opportunities for involvement in publications and presentations at national conferences are plentiful. Minimum experience is a bachelors' degree in either psychology, engineering, computer science or a related field. Prior experience with physiological research or large-scale longitudinal data, Python, and SQL are a plus, but not required. Research experience is a must. This position is ideal for someone wanting to go to graduate school in a health-related field. This position is renewable for up to three years and preference will be given to a postbac who can commit to at least two years.

More information about the lab here: www.louisvilleeatlab.com

To apply please send your CV, a cover letter, and three names of references to Luis Sandoval-Araujo at luis.sandoval-araujo@louisville.edu The official UofL job posting will be available soon, and applicants should apply through the posting as well. Application deadline is rolling and will end Feb 15, 2023 or when the position is filled. Start date is flexible, but will ideally be May 2023.