

Stigma, Psychopathology, & Assessment (SPLAT) Lab
Lab Coordinator Job Announcement

University title: Research Technician Associate (102945)

Job Opening ID: 211844

Working title: Lab Coordinator

Annual salary range: $31,200-$32,136

The Stigma, Psychopathology, & Assessment (SPLAT) Lab—directed by Dr. Craig Rodriguez-Seijas at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor campus—is seeking 1 full-time lab coordinator. The SPLAT lab examines (1) dimensional models of psychopathology and (2) factors associated with manifestation of psychosocial dysfunction among minoritized populations [sexual, gender, and racial/ethnic minority populations]. The lab coordinator will work closely with Dr. Rodriguez-Seijas to help coordinate data collection and organization of multiple projects in the lab. This position is ideal for those interested in pursuing a future PhD in clinical psychology or a related field. A successful applicant will have an interest in clinical psychology, strong organizational skills, and interest in working with understudied and minoritized populations (in particular sexual and gender minority populations).

Required Qualifications

- High school diploma or Associate's degree
- Strong organizational, interpersonal, and time management skills

Desired Qualifications

- Bachelor's or Master's degree in psychology, or related field
- Interest in clinical psychology, and interest in working with understudied and minoritized populations (in particular sexual and gender minority populations)
- Experience/interest working with sexual and/or gender minority populations and communities
- Experience with longitudinal data collection & design (e.g., EMA, ILD designs)

Lab Coordinator Duties: The lab coordinator will help coordinate data collection, organization, and analysis on multiple projects in the SPLAT Lab. Additional opportunities (e.g., publishing) will be available as a member of the SPLAT Lab depending on performance. Examples of some specific responsibilities may include:

- Designing web-based surveys for data collection
- Developing data cleaning & analytic pipelines for incoming data

- Programming data collection protocols
- General administrative duties—maintenance of lab website, Twitter profile
- Recruiting, screening, training, & supervising undergraduate research assistants
- Maintenance of lab operations documents for continuity of lab functioning
- Managing participant outreach and recruitment
- Designing accessible recruitment materials

Additional Information: This is a full-time (40 hrs/wk), 12-month term-limited position, with the possibility of renewal based on performance and the availability of funding. The target start date is June 1, 2022.

Should I Apply? Studies show that women, persons of color, and persons from other less socially privileged backgrounds are less likely to apply for positions unless they meet every one of the qualifications listed. I would encourage you to apply if (1) you believe that you have the skills for this position, (2) meet some of the criteria outlined above, and (3) you are passionate about clinical psychology research and studying sexual, gender, and racial/ethnic diversity within clinical science.
