

The Alcohol and Sexual Assault Prevention (ASAP) Lab at Georgia State University (GSU) has openings for 1-2 two-year research coordinator(s) with a flexible start date to work with Dr. Amanda Gilmore. Research Coordinators will work primarily on coordinating data collection for federally-funded projects to prevent alcohol use and sexual violence with a focus on health equity. Current grants focus on LGBTQIA+ young adults, military personnel, and college students. Research Coordinators will have dedicated time to scholarly activities to advance their career or to prepare for graduate school applications. Our goal is to identify highly organized individuals with a growth mindset to join our team!

Setting: The National Center for Sexual Violence Prevention (NCSVP) is housed within the Mark Chaffin Center for Healthy Development (<https://healthy.gsu.edu/about/>), a university-level research center at GSU committed to promoting the health, safety and well-being of children, adults and families through research, service, education, training and advocacy. The MCCHD has a specific focus on health disparities, and we are recruiting an emerging scholar with research interests within health disparities research. Our center includes a Prevention Research Center Focused on Migrant Health (<https://news.gsu.edu/2019/03/27/funded-by-3-75-million-grant-georgia-state-to-establish-prevention-research-center-focused-on-migrant-health/>) and GSU is among the most diverse colleges and universities in the U.S., and annually graduates more African American students than any other public or nonprofit higher education institution.

Apply: Please send a letter of interest and CV to Dr. Amanda Gilmore (agilmore12@gsu.edu) and Dr. Nicole Mullican (kmullican@gsu.edu).
