

Study Coordinator in the Collab Lab at VA San Diego and UC San Diego

The Collab Lab (PI: Dr. Emily Treichler; thecollablab.org) at VA San Diego and UC San Diego has an opening for a study coordinator to fulfill an essential role in VA-based clinical research related to improving collaborative decision-making between Veterans with psychotic disorders and their mental health providers. Study coordinator may elect to engage in manuscript writing, poster presentations, grant writing, and/or other dissemination of research results. The study coordinator will receive ongoing mentorship to achieve their professional goals including presentations and publications, as well as mentorship through the graduate admissions process if applicable. The study coordinator may also work on other projects in the lab as desired. We seek applicants who can commit to remain with the lab for at least 2 years. Start date: July/August 2024. This is a primarily onsite position in San Diego, CA; 1 day/week virtual work possible if desired. We will fill the role as soon as possible to allow for VA onboarding time. Please send questions and application materials (CV/resume and 1-2pg cover letter) to Dr. Treichler at etreichler@health.ucsd.edu.
